Free Central Air-Conditioning for 1 Year

Purchase of a Furnace at 1/2 Price. Offer extended!

Doug Matz, Owner

Most anyone in business has their busy and slow times. The heating and air-conditioning industry is no different, and fluctuates dramatically with the various seasons.

In the off-season the A/C and heating business slows down to the point where our installers are sitting around without much work. Many companies lay people off in these slow times and hope to replace their skilled workers when business picks up. This is not good business practice and is unfair to the employees and their families.

Other Dealers have refused to compromise and let the public know this, but at Flanders we value our skilled workers greatly and would rather keep them busy, even if it means making little or no money. To do this, I'm going to slash the price of our first rate A/C and Heating Systems.

Here's my offer:

Purchase a Premier Central Heating & Air-Conditioning System (Furnace and A/C) and I'll give you the high efficient Furnace at 1/2 the normal price. Plus take one year to pay for the system W.A.C (with approved credit).

If you need only an A/C or Furnace, I'll still give you a discount off the cost of the equipment plus guarantee at least 25% energy savings or I'll pay you double the difference of any unrealized savings during the first year.

You see, this time of year is a slower time of the year for my company. People are putting off buying an A/C and/or a Furnace till their units stop working. So by helping us now we'll pass big savings on to help you, a true win, win.

With your new A/C and/or Furnace, we will go the extra mile to give you up to 10 years Parts and Labor warranty against any future repair bills. That's a full decade!!!

Free for 1 Year:

As I stated earlier you'll not have to pay for this system for up to a year with our Same as Cash program. You see while most folks are waiting till next year to purchase a new Furnace you'll get to enjoy a new heating system through the remaining of the cold times in comfort and lock in 2011 pricing, all while not having to pay anything till 2012. Not to mention getting a more efficient Furnace, you'll start saving real energy dollars right away.

Here's my offer:

Summary:

- Purchase a Premier A/C system and get a high efficient Furnace at 1/2 price.
- Guarantee 25% energy savings.
- Don't pay till Winter 2012
- Repair free Warranty for up to 10 Years.
- The best in quality and efficiency.
- 1 Year Same as Cash

Plus all our systems are covered by our Exclusive 365 day 100% Unconditional Satisfaction Money Back Guarantee.

So call Flanders Heating & Air Conditioning today for your free no obligation survey at 631-823-3302.

Offer expires May 15th, 2011.

Frank Lloyd Wright House May Move to Sagaponack

By Dan Rattiner

Around the United States today, there are about 34 towns and cities that have in them homes built by Frank Lloyd Wright. They are tourist destinations. People come from around the world to see the Pew House in Madison, Wisconsin, or the Robie Prairie-style house in Chicago or Fallingwater in Mill Run, Pennsylvania. They are examples of the work of a man who was a great genius of the 20th century, the founder of Modern Architecture and probably the greatest American architect who ever lived. The homes are also breathtakingly beautiful.

In a strange twist, a home built in a flood zone in New Jersey is now being proposed to be moved, panel by panel, to an historic but little known residential development in the woods north of the Montauk Highway in Sagaponack.

“When I read about this development in the Times,” Tarantino said, “I knew this could be the perfect home for our house.”

The announcement of the proposal came in a dramatic speech made on March 17 at the Architectural Digest Home Design Show at the Javits Center in Manhattan. The speaker, Lawrence Tarantino, an architect of note himself, who along with his wife, Sharon, also an architect, lives and works in Wright's Bachman-Wilson House in Millstone, New Jersey. Twenty-four years ago, early in their careers, they learned that the house was in serious disrepair as a result of the flooding caused by Hurricane Doria in 1971. They bought the house, and with their own money lovingly restored it, becoming now not only architects but also preservationists and stewards. But then, in 1999, there came Hurricane Floyd, which flooded it again. And they fixed it again. But they came to the inescapable conclusion that if the house was to survive in the long term, it would have to be moved.

“New Jersey has its own agenda when it comes to development,” Tarantino said bitterly, “and protecting historic properties is not its priority.”

Last year, the Tarantinos saw an article in The New York Times that they felt was an answer to their prayers. It described the attempted revival by two builders of a failed 140-acre housing development in the woods of Sagaponack. There, 32 plots of land had been set aside for homes to be built by 32 celebrated modern architects. The names of these willing architects are on small signs on the entry driveways to their plots. But only eight houses got built before the developer of the place, Harry “Coco” Brown Jr. passed away in 2005. Homes there that are occupied today are by Philip Johnson, Stan Allen, Keenen Riley, Sam Mockbee, Zaha Hadid, Steven Holl,

Linda Roy, Daniel Rowan and Richard Meier. Mockbee holds two MacArthur Genius awards. Zaha Hadid, an Iraqi, won a Pritzker Award, the highest honor that architects bestow on their own. The owners would pick the architect. It would be one to a customer. The costs would be about $1 million each.

Signs on the driveways of the 24 other sites remain.

"When I read about this development in the Times," Tarantino said to the assembled crowd at the Javits, "I knew this could be the perfect home for our house." The Bachman-Wilson House is in the Millstone Historic District. Tarantino has gotten permission from the Frank Lloyd Wright Building Conservancy. He has asked for permission from the Historic District, but he doesn't need it. There are only rules about tearing down a historic structure in Millstone, nothing about moving a historic structure away.

In the summer of 2002, I sat with Coco Brown in the Candy Kitchen in Bridgehampton to hear about his amazing proposal. Brown was the son of a well-known Hollywood movie producer. His first development, fresh out of college, was to buy 188 wooded acres overlooking Los Angeles and develop them with private homes. He named the main road in the development Mulholland Drive.

The development is probably the most exclusive in LA. He had a long career of other brilliant developments, the most recent, the development of a shopping center with a multiplex in it in Hampton Bays. At this time in his life, he lived on Loper's Path in Bridgehampton.

"So I got this idea," he told me. "It seems to me that the eastern end of Long Island is a Mecca for modern architecture. Lots have been built. But many of them are between two McMansions. It seems to me modern needs to be surrounded by more modern to be effective. I want to make a whole development of them. And there is this land, deep in the woods for sale I can get.

"I ran this idea past Richard Meier, who I've known since we were kids back in the Village in the 1960s. Would he be willing to be one of the architects for this development I wanted to make in Sagaponack? I thought I'd have to sell it to him. But he said yes right away. Not only that, but he'd be the chief advisor for the place and he'd arrange for me to contact 33 great other modern architects. And so we did that and each and every one of them said yes! It was like in that movie where one guy says 'let's put on a show' and everybody just gathers around and they do that."

But the development might not go easy. It was "North of the Montauk Highway." It was also under the flight path of planes coming into East Hampton Airport.

"It will sell itself," Brown said when I asked how he would deal with this. "Nothing like this has ever been done."

But it didn't go easy. And then Brown passed away four years later, and two local Hampton builders, James O'Brien and Richard Reinhardt, bought the property with the eight homes on it from Brown's estate. And they continue on with it, now trying to develop it as "The Houses at Sagaponack."

Needless to say, the plan to move the Frank Lloyd Wright house here has electrified the community. It could get the whole development back in motion in a minute.

The plan back in the early 1950s to build what would become the Bachman-Wilson House came about because Gloria Bachman's brother Marvin was working as an apprentice for the Frank Lloyd Wright Fellowship in Chattanooga, Tennessee. The Fellowship was supervising the construction of Wright's Shavin House there. Gloria Bachman and her husband Abraham Wilson wrote to Frank Lloyd Wright.

At the time, Wright was in Manhattan, supervising the construction of his Guggenheim Museum on Fifth Avenue. He was in his late 80s at this time. He was living at The Plaza.

"I suppose," Wright wrote back, "I am still here to try to do houses for such as you."

And so Wright designed it and it got built. During this time, New York had gone crazy about Frank Lloyd Wright. He was actually here. A legend in his time. And at the age of 88 doing this crazy cylindrical museum. A huge exhibit of Wright's work called the Usonian

11 Years of Hell

Our Fishermen Suffered at the Hands of Corrupt Officials

By Dan Rattiner

This story is just so unbelievable that you could say it could not possibly be true. But it is. It involves the government outfit, a division of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), which is in charge of enforcing the fisheries laws here in the Northeast. It is based in Gloucester, Massachusetts, but it oversees policing and fining operations from Maine to Virginia, and that includes Greenport, Montauk and Hampton Bays.

For the last 11 years, the enforcement officers, headed up by its director of federal fisheries law enforcement, Dale J. Jones Jr., have fined our fishermen over the most trivial of transgressions, and in some cases have seized catches and even boats and other fishing equipment and vehicles for violations that are just miniscule. They used informants. They keep secret penalty schedules and records they refuse to make available to those they oversee. And they treated the fishermen like criminals.

While doing this, the officers show up in brand new cars, SUVs and even sports cars, and they would openly about the government-paid vacations they took to exotic areas and other perks of their jobs. Many of the fishermen, losing their boats to these enforcers, have had to leave the business.

What could be done about this? The fishermen complained. Nothing was done.

Beginning in 2007, a reporter named Richard Gaines from The Gloucester Times, began looking into this situation. Basically, what he came up with was that the fines in the Northeast were five times higher than the fines for the identical offenses in other NOAA districts. He also found that, apparently because the people in the main office in Washington were happy with these huge fines, the Northeast Region was left to do whatever it wanted to do, unencumbered by oversight. After all, the money was rolling in.

Gaines also discovered that the fancy cars and

ROBERT F.X. SILLERMAN STARTS A NEW COMPANY

By Dan Rattiner

Southampton's Bob Sillerman was in the news this past week. Having resigned last year from his post as CEO of the public company he founded five years ago, CKx, he has now created a company called Function (X), which is to be a new platform for investments in media and entertainment.

Sillerman remains CKx's largest stockholder and will consult with the new CEO, Ed Bleier, who also has a house in the Hamptons.

On the surface of it, this seems to be just another of those big Wall Street transactions, which are limited in interest to only those who are on the Fortune 500. But honestly, the story of Bob Sillerman, or officially Robert F. X. Sillerman, is one of the most extraordinary stories in American business and a testament to successful American capitalism. It's a story that needs to be told.

Robert Sillerman came to the attention of people here in the Hamptons in the 1990s, when he and his wife became friendly with the crowd of people who regularly went to the Road D beach in Southampton. This beach was largely populated in those years by the students, faculty and administration of Southampton College. At that time Tim Bishop, now our Congressman, was the Dean of the college. The chancellor was Angier Biddle Duke of the Duke family fortune.

Sillerman was considered just another of the extremely wealthy people living along the beach nearby. But at the same time he was a down-to-earth fellow and became well liked by those at D beach. He also had a full-sized basketball court indoors in the basement of his home, which was fun. And he often entertained.

In 1992, Angier Biddle Duke, who was 79, was hit by a car and killed while rollerblading on Wickapogue Lane in Water Mill.

It was a shock to the community. A search began for a new chancellor. And it centered on Sillerman. At that time, Sillerman was in his 40s and was already one of the richest men in America. He was a self-made millionaire. People respected that.

When he was 29, Sillerman befriended Bruce "Cousin Brucie" Morrow, the rock-and-roll deejay from the earlier days in the radio business. Cousin Brucie's fame was pretty much in decline in 1979 since rock and roll was no longer in favor, but the two of them nevertheless went into partnership together and bought several radio stations in upstate New York.

The years went by and the partnership thrived. Ultimately, Sillerman bought out his trucks the enforcement people were driving were items confiscated by them from the fishermen themselves. These agents had been given unlimited access to what had been seized, no questions asked. Almost $100 million in this Asset Forfeiture Fund was at their personal disposal. Gaines also found that the agents could spend the ordinance violation money they took in without oversight, and on top of that, when they took elaborate vacations to Las Vegas, Aruba and other resorts, they then, in addition, filed with NOAA for reimbursement under the cloak of "conferences attended."

In 2008, as the articles in the paper continued, Director of Law Enforcement Jones ordered a massive shredding of documents.

In 2008, as the scope of this continued to grow, an "internal" investigation of the Northeast Region was begun by the National Marine Fisheries Division of NOAA. The results were a whitewash. Not only were Jones and the other officers exonerated, they were also praised. The man running the investigation, Deputy Assistant John Oliver, wrote to the enforcement people "you should be very proud of your office and the work that you do." As a result of this, Oliver's superior, then director William Hogarth of the National Marine Fisheries Division, proposed Oliver for a Presidential Rank Award for Meritorious Service. He received this award and along with it a bonus of $34,440 on top of his regular $106,000 salary.

In 2008, a woman named Dr. Jane Lubchenco was appointed by incoming President Barack Obama as the new administrative chief of NOAA. She took personal command of the ongoing corruption accusations in the Northeast Region, appointing Eric Schwaab to the job of heading up NOAA Fisheries and Lois Schiffer as chief counsel.

This became another bogus investigation. Schiffer and Schwaab wrote a memo to Lubchenco saying they interpreted their charge to be to change the rules without looking back at "prior miscarriages." When local fishermen in Montauk, Greenport and Hampton Bays complained to their congressmen about this, as did fishermen in other locations, the matter was taken up by the Commerce Department in Washington.

Commerce, on September 24, 2010, appointed a retired judge from Washington State, a former prosecutor named Charles B. Swartwood III, to become a Special Master and gave him a six-month time frame to come up with a report he would pass on to the Commerce Department's Inspector General, Todd Zinser, for further action. Swartwood gave a ringing endorsement of what he intended to do. And he did it. The report came out last week.

The report focuses on Dale J. Jones, the director of federal fisheries law enforcement.

Taking over in 1999, he hired mostly agents expert in criminal investigations rather than agents used to administrative violations. With all the money they took in in fines, he oversaw the purchase of vehicles from the Asset Forfeiture Fund that totalled more of them than there were agents.

It turned out that John Oliver, the deputy that had been awarded a medal and a bonus for an earlier internal investigation, had learned of the document shredding ordered by Jones, but then never did anything about it. He saw no reason to pass this on to higher-ups.

The report noted that an auditing firm hired by the Inspector General to look into the com-

Finicky

All of Us Have Our Food Likes and Dislikes. Here Are Mine.

By Dan Rattiner

After the big holiday dinner, we sat around and talked about, among other things, our food preferences and finickinesses. It was unanimously agreed that, although I appeared perfectly well-mannered while eating, I was nevertheless by far the most finicky eater in the room. I was urged by those in that room to share my likes and dislikes with the readers to see if there is a psychiatrist among them who can offer solutions to my problems.

BREAKFAST

The milk doesn't go into the cold cereal until just moments before you are ready to eat it. Once it does, the eating begins and though it proceeds neither quickly nor slowly, it is not to be disturbed by any commotions, such as guests coming to the door that you have to get up for. If you do that, the milk turns the cereal soggy. So you have to sit there and eat it and appear to be rude, even though that is not the case. Use only a small spoon. That way you have a greater ability to get both the cereal and the milk to run out exactly at the same time. Should you fail at this, a small amount of either milk or cereal must be added until the whole thing can be consumed with neither running out. Sometimes this minor adjustment with the milk or cereal has to be done several times to make it come out right.

COFFEE

Morning coffee must be consumed with copious amounts of whole milk so when it is handed to you it is warm, but not hot. There is nothing worse than burning your tongue with that first sip of coffee and I do not understand how others put up with that.

CHOCOLATE

No chocolate can be consumed by me until after noon. The exception to this is a French brioche with a ribbon of chocolate running through it. My ban in the morning extends to chocolate chip muffins and even to chocolate donuts. No chocolate. Just that one exception.

BAGELS

Bagels must be served burnt on the top and bottom, soft and hot on the inside. By burnt, I mean burned. Even the garlic or the onions sprinkled on top must be blackened. The sides can be brown. But all the outside has to be crispy. Sesame seeds have no place on a bagel.

OMELETES

I will not eat any omelet that has something on the top other than bacon or Parmesan cheese.

ON THE SET WITH "ROYAL PAINS"

By David Lion Rattiner

Southampton's Main Street was awash with movie cameras and film crews last week as the third season of "Royal Pains" was filming here for the USA Networks show. Main Street, for the most part, was fairly quiet. What traffic there was was being handled by the local police who would stop a car or two while scenes were being filmed. When the director yelled, "CUT," the cars moved on. I was on the set for about half an hour and traffic didn't seem to be a problem on Main Street.

Since the beginning of season one, the creators of the show have consistently made efforts in keeping it as authentic as possible when it comes to the Hamptons background.

Many employees of local shops, as well as store owners, looked out on Main Street to see what all the commotion was about, and, of course, to get a glimpse of Mark Feuerstein, who is the star of the show. Whenever possible, all eyes were on the actor, who plays Dr. Hank Lawson, a talented and innovative doctor who can solve even the most unexpected problems like a "Medical MacGyver," and unexpectedly becomes a physician to the wealthiest residents of the Hamptons.

Eyes were also on Paulo Costanzo, who plays Evan R. Lawson on the show, the brother of Feuerstein's character. Costanzo's character is a wannabe Hamptonite who embraces every possible stereotype about the Hamptons because he believes that it will help him fit in more, when in fact it has the opposite effect. Costanzo was very generous, and allowed a photo to be taken of him on set.

"Whatever's better for the paper," he said with a smile.

Sometimes film crews come to a place and act as if they own it, showing little respect for the people and businesses there. It would be safe to say that the "Royal Pains" crew "gets it" when it comes to handling filming in the Hamptons. During one scene, a Southampton ambulance drove by the set, at which point everybody made sure that it got through as quickly as possible.

The cast and crew seemed extra respectful because they were filming in the middle of the

Inside, I will not abide pieces of broccoli or long stringy pieces of uncooked onion. If I find either, I will fish them out and set them aside on a corner of the plate.

Onions that have been chopped fine and browned first are welcome in my omelet. Also welcome are cheese, ham and red and green peppers. Not welcome is tomato—that is terrible even thinking about it—or pieces of carrot or broccoli. Bacon is acceptable draped across the top of my omelet, but only if the bacon is cooked crisp. Non-crisp bacon has no place inside my omelet. Those things I do not like in an omelet I will ferret out and put to one side.

ZUCCHINI

I will not abide zucchini in any form.

CHEESEBURGERS

I like cheeseburgers crispy on the outside and red on the inside. If onions are cooked they can go on top of a cheeseburger, but not inside a cheeseburger. If onions are raw, they can go on top of a cheeseburger if in a sliced or diced form, and they can go inside the cheeseburger only if they are raw and finely chopped. If they are long and stringy and raw, it ruins the inside of any cheeseburger I eat. I will not eat it.

BAKED POTATO

I love baked potatoes if the outside is crisp and the inside is warm and loveable and steam is coming out. I can put sour cream or chives or other things into a baked potato and it will satisfy me as an entire meal, but in a restaurant, where it often sells for $6 with everything, I find it impossible to tell myself I can have a whole meal for that amount of money and so I order other things with it, which overall is too much to eat. But I eat it all anyway.

GRAVY

Gravy belongs on the thing it was made to be poured upon. On my plate, if the gravy begins on a chicken and begins to flow outward toward, say, the peas, I will carefully herd the peas over to one side to let the gravy pass.

COOKED VEGETABLES

I am suspicious of cooked vegetables. I will eat cooked vegetables if they are "neat," that is to say they have a beginning and an end. Peas fall into this category. At some point on your plate there is a pea, and at another point not. Squash, zucchini and artichokes are not neat. They can flop all over and stick out or stick up. I can be ruined by a cooked vegetable that has something stringy attached to it that comes off in my mouth. Peas in a pod can do this. Also, if there is a twig or string anywhere in the portion of vegetables, whether meant to be there—a favorite chef's spice for example—or not, I pass.

FOOD STACKING

One of the most horrible moments in my life was when, sitting at a fine restaurant, I was given my main course for the first time with everything stacked up one upon the other. I remember it vividly. It was July 11, 1994. I was told by the waiter this was the very latest thing. On the bottom was the spinach, above it was a piece of chicken, above that was some mashed potatoes and above that were some spices and ornaments of some sort. I still wake up in the middle of the night remembering this. The whole thing had to be separated and then there were still pieces of things sticking to other things. Horrible.

SUSHI

I love sushi. I crave it. But only once a week and then, after I've eaten it, I don't want any more of it until at least seven days have passed at which time the crave returns.

FISH

If I eat a fish and find a bone in it, either in my mouth or on the way to my mouth, I feel awful. It is a betrayal is what it is. I have come very close to becoming a medical emergency. I will then not order fish again for at least two weeks after which, with the memory of the ordeal fading, I will take the risk again and, until another bone turns up, even after five dinners of fish without a bone, I will be turned off fish for two weeks again.

SPAGHETTI and MEATBALLS

The spaghetti has to be served hot and alone, by itself, with nothing on it. In a special dish or bowl alongside, the meatballs and sauce are to be presented. I shall then be presented with a small ladle and will thus be in control of how the meatballs and sauce are placed on top of the spaghetti. I place the meatballs and sauce on only one part of the spaghetti pile and then when that part of the pile is eaten, sauce and meat will be then spooned onto the next part and so forth and so on, until the last piece of white virgin spaghetti gets hers. Another thing—the spaghetti and meatballs and sauce must run out at exactly the partner and by the 1990s, when he met up with Southampton academia at Road D, he owned the largest privately owned chain of radio stations in the United States under the name SFX Broadcasting and was worth well into the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Sillerman accepted the post of chancellor and committed tens of millions of dollars of his own money to the college—which at the time was privately owned—finally making a huge pledge to pay for a massive new library that Long Island University, the owners of the college, intended to build.

In those years Sillerman really knew just about everybody in the music and events business. He was good friends with Ron Delsener, the great master of rock concerts. And year after year, Sillerman and his wife Laura put together a concert on the campus of the college called “All for the Sea,” which featured performers such as Bob Dylan, Tina Turner, Billy Joel and Jimmy Buffet. These concerts raised millions and millions of additional dollars for the school.

During this time, Sillerman’s fortunes climbed even higher and soon he was on the Forbes 400 list. Indeed, during his time as chancellor, he expanded his radio station holdings and then broadened the company’s interest into concert promotion, sports agencies and Broadway shows, becoming the largest promoter, producer and presenter of live entertainment in the world. He changed the name of the company from SFX

Broadcasting to SFX Entertainment to mark this expansion at that time, and then famously sold the whole thing to Clearview Channel, the publicly owned radio station company, for $4.4 billion.

Sillerman’s parties on Meadow Lane were legendary during this period. He bought a second home there. I have a photograph hanging on the wall in my office of myself with Mel Brooks, a man I greatly admire, who I met one night at a Sillerman party. Sillerman knew Brooks because Sillerman had produced Brooks’ Broadway show The Producers.

During this time, the Sillermans celebrated their 25th anniversary by renting out Irving Plaza and hiring Willie Nelson to perform. At the party, Bob presented his wife Laura with $100 million to launch the Tomorrow Foundation, a charity that she currently runs. He also helped finance and promote Tim Bishop’s successful run for Congress.

In 2004, however, things at the college in Southampton took a turn for the worse. I don’t think Sillerman had ever encountered a situation that was so completely out of his control. The owners of the college, Long Island University, announced that they would be closing the college and putting it up for sale. There would be no college that Sillerman could be chancellor of as far as they were concerned. Perhaps it would be a residential development. As things turned out, however, LIU sold the college to Stony Brook University, which would have no need of Sillerman’s services as chancellor. Also, as it turned out, LIU only built the shell of the library that Sillerman had promised to fund. There was money he had pledged toward the building of it that had not been paid to anybody. Now, with the workmen laying down their tools, there was no one to pay it to. So he declined to fund it further.

Sillerman had had a great passion for this college in Southampton. One might have thought he would walk away and sink into a depression over these developments. He did walk away. He was given no choice. Soon after, though, he was involved in something even more extraordinary that he dreamed up.

What was he really good at? He was good at promotion, entertainment, showmanship and producing. Why not form a brand new company from scratch and buy up the marketing rights to some of the greatest icons in America?

Thus, in 2005, did Sillerman form CKx, Inc. He targeted exactly four American icons. They were the Beatles, Muhammad Ali, Elvis Presley and “American Idol.” He negotiated to buy all four. He got three. Only the Beatles eluded him.

From 2005 until late last year, Sillerman and his team were promoting these three icons everywhere. They were on TV, they had appearances, there were retrospectives, there were endorsements, branding, products, contests and promotions.

Perhaps the one that was most successful, at least from the point of view of taking it from point A to point B was his purchase of the rights to Elvis Presley. He bought the rights from Presley’s daughter for about $1.5 million. He then transformed Elvis’ Memphis home into a kind of mini-theme park, complete with hotels

Stella Maris Catholic School May Close

By T.J. Clemente

In recent weeks the financial difficulties facing Stella Maris, the venerable Sag Harbor Catholic school, have been in the news. Facing debts in the neighborhood of $500,000 and an enrollment decline, the trustees of the school are dealing with a myriad of problems. Stella Maris is supported by five local churches, including the Queen of the Most Holy Rosary in Bridgehampton and St. Andrew's Church in Sag Harbor. The school enrolls children from pre-kindergarten through eighth grade.

In the last 10 years nationally more than 1,000 Catholic schools have closed. In fact, in the United States, 174 Catholic schools closed just last year. The Archdiocese of Chicago lost 31% of its student population, the Archdiocese of New York lost 26% of its students and the Archdiocese of Brooklyn lost 33%, all in the last decade. Last year, the Archdiocese of New York, which serves 2.5 million Catholics, announced it would close 27 more schools.

When asked about Stella Maris and its financial difficulties, New York State Assemblyman Fred Thiele said, "It is hard for me to comment on the particulars of the financial viability of Stella Maris or Catholic schools in general because I simply don't know the details. However, with regard to Stella Maris, I can say that this school has been an important and integral part of quality education on the East End and an important part of the Sag Harbor community for decades. I attended public school at Pierson, but received my religious education at Stella Maris as well as participating in many other activities at the school such as basketball and youth group activities. The loss of this school would be tragic, not just for the current students and parents, but for the community at large."

Reports have the school owing the Rockville Center Diocese in the neighborhood of $300,000 for group insurances and other debts. Enrollment at Stella Maris has declined by over 30 students in the last year, and Principal Jane Peters has resigned her position and will leave at the end of this school year.

"The recession has affected everyone, including Catholic schools," Thiele said. "While New York does not provide general aid to Catholic schools, because of constitutional limits regarding the separation of church and state, the state does provide funding to all non-public schools to reimburse them for certain state-mandated measures. These reimbursements have been cut by the state since 2009 at an even greater rate than for public schools. Further, the unfair MTA payroll tax has also impacted Catholic schools. Public schools are reimbursed for the tax. Non-public schools are not. I have vehemently opposed this tax in general and have supported initiatives to exempt all schools (public and non-public) from the tax."

The tuition at Stella Maris costs $5,500 for a child living within the four Catholic parishes surrounding Stella Maris. If a family enrolls two children

tuition is $9,170, and for three children it's $12,370. However, for families living outside the parishes, the tuition is higher. The school's overall budget is being addressed, and a proposed austerity budget of $1.2 million for the next school year is on the table. Parents hope to raise $90,000 from fundraising, according to a reported e-mail sent from the school board to parents.

Sean Dolan, a media spokesperson for the Diocese in Rockville Center, said that although Stella Maris owes about $300,000 to the Diocese for insurance costs, the Diocese will appropriate $90,000 both this year and next to help balance the school's budget. With $50,000 raised by parents already, only $40,000 needs to be raised by August 31. However if enrollment, which fluctuates around 327, falls to below 302, reports say the school will be shut down, which might mean an uptick in enrollment at Our Lady of the Hamptons in Southampton.

Southampton Retail Store Musical Chairs

By T.J. Clemente

The small town shop owner must compete with the Goliath's of the world, those brand-named businesses that are well financed and positioned to make prudent moves. In Southampton Village, a few shops have had to move to new locations to combat escalating rents in these tough economic times.

Besim Cukaj, owner of Besim's Fine Cigars, is one retail shop owner moving off Jobs Lane to Main Street to adjust to rent issues. Then there is the curious situation of Brahmin Inc., also on Jobs Lane, which is actually moving one door down because of a rent issue. It has been reported that there were higher bids for Brahmin's old location, so the landlord gave Brahmin a reasonable price for the space literally next door. Breezin' Up is also relocating off Jobs Lane to Main Street.

Hal Zwick, a commercial/retail rent specialist at Devlin McNiff, explained that commercial rents are going up in the Hamptons almost everywhere except perhaps Water Mill, which Zwick believes will also rise "after the recession is totally over in the Hamptons." Zwick estimated, based on his decades of experience, that retail rents are highest in East Hampton, where they rose 25% this year to $110-$140 per square foot. Bridgehampton's retail rents are about "$50 and above" per square foot, he said, and

Southampton was in the "$55 to $75 range."

Zwick noted that Southampton rents are lower than East Hampton for a few reasons: "Less foot traffic due to the movie theater in town being outside the shopping area and having its own parking lot. Also the stores close down earlier." Zwick sees Sag Harbor square-foot retail rents of "$50 and above beginning to rise slowly."

Commenting on the empty stores in prime locations, Zwick said we can expect to see those stores occupied by "pop-ups," stores that did not secure long term leases and rent just for the season. He noted in East Hampton this year that "pop-ups" are renting for twice what they paid for last year but still only about 75% of the standard five-year rent a lease would bring the landlord annually.

Zwick is bullish on retail business long term for the area. "More people are moving out here, full time, and real estate in general is passing into stronger hands." As for this season, even the optimistic pro-Hamptons Zwick admitted the gas situation will be a wild card, yet he thinks it will bring more people to the Hamptons.

day. Some people were obviously on edge, which is something that occurs on every movie/television shoot. In case you haven't noticed, Hamptonites tend to be a little territorial, and they don't care if you are the Pope coming through, if there isn't respect for the area and for the people of the Hamptons, you can bet your hat that local officials and active participants in government will get in the complaint line. Which is a good thing.

Even though last weekend we finally had a break from the cold weather, during the week that "Royal Pains" was shooting, it was chilly and damp. Costanzo and most of the other actors were wearing short sleeve shirts because the show is set in the summertime, however, outside it was about 50 degrees, so when he wasn't being filmed, Costanzo sported a heavy coat.

Production Assistant Rich Koski, who was wearing a Red Sox baseball cap, stood on the east side of Main Street to keep the extras informed of where they needed to be. He may be a Red Sox fan, but in general seemed like a pretty nice guy and was happy to be filming in Southampton. "It's nice to be out here. It's a great day to be filming in the Hamptons," he said in between speaking into his radio.

Hamptons local (sort of) Rune Lind stood by as he waited for his cue from the director to act like what he is, a Hamptons' guy in Southampton. "I'm having a pretty good time so far. It's cool." Rune lives in Santa Monica with his wife and two kids, but has roots on the East End.

Other than a staged Jitney accident that spooked a few people because they thought it was a real accident, the week of shooting seemed to go without any problems. We're looking forward to the next season of "Royal Pains."

Exhibit was mounted and put on display at the Museum of Modern Art, including the plans and elevations for his never built "Mile High" Skyscraper for Chicago. (See what just rose up in Abu Dhabi this past year?) It coincided with the publication of his latest book The Natural House.

Wright, who around 1905 created the foundations of modern architecture with his work around the country, was now, in 1954, founding residential architecture based on sustainability!! Practically nobody knew what he was talking about.

"Organic buildings are the strength and lightness of the spider's spinning, buildings qualified by light bred by native character to everyone and married to the ground," he wrote.

Future homes, he said, should have passive solar orientations, radiant floors, minimum amounts of waste and economy of design—these should be the guiding philosophy.

Wright designed the Bachman-Wilson house with that in mind. There is no sheetrock in the house. It has a fly-ash stone foundation, walls of board and batten mahogany panels and huge arrays of glass. The house flows from room to room. There is a two-story living room with a clerestory rising above it where wooden panels filter light into the room by day and act as a lantern with the light filtering through the trees at night.

The house can be easily moved when the time comes, if you can call moving a house easy. It is bolted together with flat head brass screws. It can be easily disassembled. The fly-ash stonewall will have to be built as a replica. All the rest will be original.

Altogether on the site, along with a cabana guesthouse across the way and a solar pergola situated between the guesthouse and the main house, the whole compound in Sagaponack will finish up at 3,200 square feet of living space.

What's needed is a buyer. If that's you, contact either Ingrid Brownyard or Amelia Doggwiler at Brown Harris Stevens in Southampton at 631-204-2426. They have the exclusive on this project. The cost is $5 million, and yes this is a plug, but you know, I think this would be wonderful.

ings and goings in the Asset Forfeiture Fund, was unable to complete its work because there was incomplete documentation, but over four years nearly $50 million was drawn out of it in 82,000 transactions.

Supporting Jones and rubberstamping all of it was the department's attorney, Charles Juliand, in charge of enforcement and litigation in the Northeast Division.

Last October, with great fanfare, it was announced in a press release that Dale J. Jones Jr. was being relieved of his command. His salary of $158,500 would now be paid to a new bureaucrat named Alan Risenhoover.

The next day, in a separate press release, it was announced by NOAA that a highly respected member of the Fisheries team, Dale J. Jones, would now be the new Fisheries Program Specialist with duties that would require the "ability to manage, through subordinate supervisors, a complex or large bureau-level office; or manage the administrative functions of a large line component, applying skill in establishing objectives and assessing progress and skill in coordinating activities of several units and making adjustments to meet changing requirements within available resources." His new salary would be $155,000.

No mention of Jones' former job appears in the press release.

Attorney Juliand was also relieved of his command. He has been reassigned to the Gulf of Mexico and the oil spill there, but his pay grade will remain unchanged at Grade 15, Step 9, which is roughly $126,000.

Meanwhile, Congress is not finished with this. Rep. Dennis J. Kucinich, the chairman of the House Domestic Policy Subcommittee of the Committee on Government Oversight and Reform, is scheduling hearings to see if "adequate actions have been taken against Mr. Jones in response to the mistreatment of our local fishermen under his watch."

I think two things. One is we nominate Richard Gaines for a Pulitzer Prize. The other is we elect Donald Trump President. He would come in, listen to this story, and then say "You're Fired!"

Who's Here

By Nanci E. LaGarenne

Capt. Milt Miller will be 96 in November, but he isn't done yet. "I've done everything. But I've got a lot left to do." He had my rapt attention for several hours last week as I listened and learned from this fascinating man. "You know about fishing?" he asked me. "Barely," I said, my pen ready for a long story.

"I was born 2,000 feet from the ocean, down on Atlantic Avenue in Amagansett." His father was a fisherman and whaler, who joined the lifesaving service, which is what the Coast Guard was called back then, during WWI. His grandfather, Jonathan, the first Miller from England to come here, was a lighthouse keeper out in Montauk "after the Gardiner's Island (Point) Lighthouse blew down. He was in the Civil War and lost an arm. He got no pension, nothing from the war."

Milt followed in his grandfather and father's footsteps in commercial fishing and battle. Sometimes, the two can be almost one and the same. "The DEC has got the commercials over a barrel," says Miller. "Same as the Gestapo, they act. Now you need so many darn licenses, it's ridiculous. Costs $12,000 a year and then you have to try and make a living. It's all about money, not conservation anymore. They have to justify all the people they hire who know little to nothing about fish. Fish don't live forever. They cycle, they leave, they come back." He has put his money where his mouth is, organizing and founding the East Hampton Town Baymen's Association, as well as the Dory Rescue Squad. "It cost the town nothing and these guys did all the rescues. For free. They knew the water; they knew what to do. Today you got a Harbormaster, a paid position, and these guys are not fishermen. They know nothing about the water."

Fishing, Miller knows. Seine fishing, trolling, menhaden, lobstering. He's done it all. "They all think the tourists made this town. Not so. Fishing and whaling built this town. Right off Amagansett and East Hampton beaches, they caught whales." Miller's people were also Dutch whalers. "Whale oil was widely used," he says, "look at the mess we're in now, with the price of gasoline..." He was 16 years old when he joined the bunker fisherman. There was a whole fleet. He shows me a picture of the bunker steamer Amagansett that he proudly has on display in his kitchen.

"They cooked the menhaden (bunker fish) and used them for oil. Promised Land, out on Napeague, had fish factories. There was one on Hicks Island too. Five factories at one time out here. Five hundred men working in each. Promised Land had a post office and a clothing store, where you could buy your foul weather gear."

"If it wasn't for the war, I'd never have left Bonac," Miller says, digging way back where painful memories dwell. He was a Captain aboard a Coast Guard Anti-Submarine Boat. He saw several years of combat in WWII in the Navy. He's been on oil tankers, all kinds of boats in the North Atlantic and three years in the Pacific. "Down New Caledonia, down by the equator, we didn't see civilization for a long time. I was lucky I got back." You might think Miller would be glad to throw a rod in the water when he returned to his beloved East Hampton. Miller was in no shape. He had jungle rot, malaria, "the whole works," he tells me and you can see the memory return and it's not an easy one. "I saw men die at Iwo Jima."

"I'd load up my wagon and sell those cod and mackerel for five cents a piece. You had to get up early and beat the gulls."

What he did to pay homage to all the veterans of those terrible wars is get the American Legion Post built. "We made a deal. The supervisor at the time was Mulford. He asked that we didn't run a vet for his job. In return, he gives us the land for the Legion. We agreed. That's how things were done back then."

Miller's wife, Etta Miller, who passed away 20 years ago, was born Etta Midgett. "Originally, Midgett, a French name," he says. "I married a rebel from North Carolina. My family never let me forget it!" He laughs. "Remember, my grandfather fought in the Civil War." He and Etta had five children, four daughters and a son. Miller's son, Mickey, is a commercial fisherman like his father. "Trap fishing is what he does. A tradition using pond nets. But you can only fish three or four months out of the year. You can't make a decent living at it anymore."

From the reality of fishing today to bygone days, Miller reminisces... When he was about 9 or 10 years old, pulling a red wagon along the beach in Amagansett, under a full moon, when fish would chase bait into shore. "I'd load up my wagon and sell those cod and mackerel for five cents a piece. You had to get up early and beat the gulls."

Now in a wheelchair most of the time ("but I can use the walker too"), he scooted across his kitchen to the closet. "I got a Jackson Pollack," he told me. "I gave him fish, he gave me a painting of the ocean. No abstract stuff, that's not my taste. I cherish that painting. He was my friend." Miller said he is still organizing his new apartment. "I'm going to hang it right there on that wall." He has a connection to Ashawagh Hall in Springs. He used to build the easels for the art shows. "Once we hung the paintings upside down. Thing is, the appraisers didn't even know it. We got a kick out of that one," he laughs. There's a twinkle in his eye.

He knew Willem de Kooning. "I took him home plenty of times. The man didn't drive." I asked if he was the owner of a de Kooning too. He said no. "I told you, I'm not big on the abstract stuff." He points behind me to a local Ralph Carpentier painting of clammers. "That's what I like. What I know. The sea."

Lionel Barrymore was a friend too. Miller wheels himself over to the pen-and-ink drawing that Barrymore made, hanging on his kitchen wall. Nantucket. The sea and fishermen. He treasures it. "So I'm fishing off Ditch one day and I see these two women. Well, they're naked as jaybirds. They invite me over for a drink. Lionel had this little cottage out there. We all became friends. The women were Ethel and her daughter. You know, she's related to that young actress today, what's her name?"

Miller is tireless at 95, "well closer to 96," he says. He's out-lived all the Miller ancestors. "They only made 92 and 94." And most of his friends his age are gone. "Only me and Iantha Bennett left from the old class in Amagansett School. I gave up the smokes, don't drink whiskey or beer. Do all my own cooking and baking. Except bread. I was eating too much of it." He does plumbing too. I notice that a project at the kitchen sink is underway. He was an avid gardener as well. He planted his own vegetables when he lived on Meeting House Lane in Amagansett, in a house he built himself. "People helped themselves to the crop, took what they needed."

He started the first Preservation Society out same time. If I find the meatballs and sauce will be left at the end, I will order a little more spaghetti and the other way around holds true too. They have to end together, like the morning cereal. Same concept. Different meal.

By the way, a horrific thing happened to me the other day with spaghetti and meatballs. The spaghetti was served separately, but, after I put on my first dollop of meatballs and sauce on the top of one side, pure water began to leak out the bottom of the spaghetti to pool up on the plate. It had not been properly drained. Now it was trying to dilute the sauce. I fought with it with my spoon, baling and baling the water into an empty glass on the side, but it was no use. I had to send it all back. In fact, I was so upset I ordered something else entirely in its place.

NUTS

I will not eat nuts hidden in ice cream. Nuts have no business surprising me by making themselves known as I bite into what I believe is smooth, magnificent waves of nut-free ice cream. Stumbling upon them in this way is just too much to bear. An unpleasant surprise. I won't even eat nuts if they are sprinkled on the top of ice cream, or even if on top, initially, on the hot fudge. They have to be quickly brushed off before they get a chance to hide in the goo. Get away. Get away.

NUTS 2

I will eat almonds if they are slivered and on top of, say, cereal. Sometimes you find slivered almonds in cold cereal. They are meant to be there. They are approved for cereal by dieticians and health professionals. I will not eat whole almonds, though. They break funny and at odd moments. I also will not eat macadamia nuts because they are too easy to break. I will eat walnuts but only if they are chopped fine and then baked into something. I will also eat cashews and peanuts, provided they are salted. Reminds me of the circus.

FRUIT

It would take pages and pages to describe my relationship with fruit over the years. But I have come to terms with most of it. I'll even eat the skin now. Bananas I like too. But not the stringy thing that runs up them inside lengthwise. But it can be peeled away.

HOT CINNAMON CHURROS

This is a whole food group in my pyramid. Love 'em.

MILK CHOCOLATE

I do not understand why they make milk chocolate when dark chocolate tastes so much better and breaks into pieces with a cool snap. For me, milk chocolate is only to be eaten when there is no dark chocolate. Milk chocolate is, therefore, better than nothing. But not much.

A ROOT BEER FLOAT

When I am on my death bed, or about to be put to death in the electric chair, and at this time I am asked what I want for my last meal, I will, having been introduced to this by Gail Cooke, order up a root beer float. The brand of root beer does not matter. The scoop of ice cream is vanilla.

and restaurants and tours. And Elvis was everywhere—when he had been just a fading icon before.

"American Idol" was already a success when Sillerman bought it. But he brought it to even greater heights. Only the rights to Muhammad Ali did not fare as well as he might have liked. It is hard to say why.

Then came another disaster. In 2007, Sillerman purchased some land in Anguilla in the Caribbean, where he had a winter home, with the idea of building a vast resort there. He made a deal with the St. Regis Hotel and hired Greg Norman to design a golf course, but the thing went way over budget and never opened. The structure of it is mostly built today, but is closed and the golf course abandoned. Many co-investors lost money in the project. And so did Sillerman. Sillerman has rued the day he entered the world of real estate and resort living.

There is a paperweight on my desk at my home in East Hampton that bears the slogan DON'T BE AFRAID TO FAIL, BE AFRAID OF NOT TRYING. Robert F. X. Sillerman is living proof of what that slogan means.

Function (X) is now listed on the New York Stock Exchange, and I have little doubt the stock will go up. The reason will be Robert F.X. Sillerman.

Yes! August Rock Festival Moved to Airport

By David Lion Rattiner

Despite all the fuss about the Music to Know concert coming up the weekend of August 13, Chris Jones and Bill Collage, the organizers, seem to have their ducks in a row. They even made a bold decision to change the location of the concert to the East Hampton Airport instead of at a farm in Amagansett after complaints came in from residents of Amagansett. The pair received a fair amount criticism that they did not know what they were doing, but it would appear that the very opposite is true.

Chris Jones explained to me in an interview that he is extremely happy with how much is already organized and scheduled, and that he is especially happy with the recent approval by the East Hampton Town Board to switch venues to the East Hampton Airport. "We got the Town board approval this week for the airport. We're thrilled to hear about this. We expect to hear a final comment from the FAA very soon, and once that happens we will announce the dates and start selling tickets. Everything else is ready to go. We've booked all of our bands and are getting really excited."

The bands have not been announced yet for legal reasons, but Jones assured me that they were booked, "We haven't released the names of the bands yet. We have a non-disclosure with the bands, so I can't give out that information right now, but they are booked and I think that the East End is going to be extremely happy with the acts that are going to be coming to town." So far, 20 acts have been confirmed.

Among the acts rumored to be coming are Ellie Goulding and Dawes. Goulding's song "Starry Eyed" has received over 14 million views on youtube.com. Dawes is a hipster band out of Los Angeles that plays folk-rock and whose singles have been hitting the charts. Jones would not confirm or deny these two acts, again for legal reasons, but this writer believes the rumor to be true.

Jones and Collage have also focused on making this event a benefit to the local economy, which is something that has been their aim since they launched the idea. Both men are very successful in their own industries, each say that this played a big role as to why they wanted to pursue the event. Jones is the owner of Sole East hotel in Montauk, and Collage is a successful screenwriter whose work you have seen in New York Minute, Accepted and Tower Heist.

"We just thought it would be really fun for everyone and really good for tourism and local businesses near the location of the concert," Jones explained, "We are very far along in the process. We have a bunch of really great local sponsors and have been able to secure some major event sponsors, which we'll announce with the band lineup. We're going to be under $200 per ticket for the entire event, which will run all weekend, so it's going to be a very affordable event."

And so, it appears to be just a matter of waiting for the FAA to approve the concert. "Once we get the FAA green light we'll be ready to announce. The website has been built and we've even built an iPhone application to keep in touch with it as well. We're doing a really cool thing that will allow you to aggregate local deals around the event to help local businesses through our website. You'll be able to click on our website and see what local businesses are offering deals tied to the event. We're doing this free of charge as a courtesy to the area."

Are you ready to rock? We hope so!

A May Day Hootenanny With Edna's Kin

By Betty Sands

Sag Harbor can't get enough of its family band, Edna's Kin. Led by Christ Church Minister of Music, Dan Koontz, the band features Dan's dad Warren Koontz and Dan's big brother Andy. The newest member of the band, Dan's son Bo, can't play at their concert this Sunday because he's off rowing for Northfield Mount Herman Preparatory School in Massachusetts.

Edna's Kin will perform a 10 a.m. Hillbilly Mass at Christ Church, followed by a concert at 3 p.m.

What does it take to form a family band? Years of practice and dedication, drive and, in this case...a sizeable misunderstanding.

By 2006, The Sunday Series of Christ Church had played host to a number of world-class concerts in an effort to raise money to restore their pipe organ. Dan Koontz, along with Christ Church vestry member JoAnne Carter, headed the effort. They hosted classical quartets, gospel singers, opera singer Jennifer Gliere, jazz legend Hal McKusick and pianist Simon Docking, among others. They were looking for another kind of musical act, something "old timey."

Koontz sometimes plays the Sunday postlude on his acoustic guitar. His wife Stacy suggested that he play a concert with his father, who taught him how to play that old guitar and Dan's brother, Andy, a trained violinist. The Koontzes were reluctant but said if they had the time to practice and a good opening act that they would consider performing.

Stacy immediately set an October 2007 date and contracted Sag Harbor's Terry "The Singing Plumber" Sullivan to open. Dan's mom Rebecca christened the band after Koontz family matriarch Edna Earl. The rest, as they say, is history. But in the meantime there were some pretty hairy moments.

On the morning of their first concert Koontz pointed out to his wife that "the family band" had never actually played together before.

Dan has long been a professional musician, first performing on stage at age five. Today he is a recognized modern classical composer, a Guggenheim award winner, currently at work on a piece for orchestra. Warren has long played guitar and banjo in his spare time. Andy was the bassist with New York band Funky Monkey Banana Junkie and a gifted violinist. But this would be their very first time together on stage. Oops.

Edna's Kin was a huge hit with Christ Church's Sunday Series fans and they've gone on to record their first compact disc. The band has been featured at events across the Northeast including The Fingers Lake Wine Festival and Communiversity in Princeton, New Jersey. Their blue grass cover of Black Sabbath's "Iron Man" is a youtube phenom and they're set to record a second CD in Nashville this summer.

This Sunday they'll be joined by Sag Harbor harmonica player Don Schmitz and they are set to rock the house with some new tunes, some old favorites and some sing-alongs, clap-alongs, and cry-a-wistful-tear-alongs including songs featured in the George Clooney film O Brother Where Art Thou?

It's not all "church music." Dan's original songs like "Ain't That a New Low" and "My Baby's Got Pulchritude" are markedly, um, secular. Covers include Hank Williams classics and some Delmore Brothers' favorite.

Tickets are only $15, $10 for students and available at the door.

History and Elegance: Inside and Out

The Old Parsonage in Water Mill

By Sharon McKee

For those who can't get enough of the insides of other people's houses (and you know who you are), there are two house and garden tours in May that should not be missed: The East Hampton Village House & Garden Tour sponsored by St. Luke's Episcopal Church in East Hampton (May 6-7), and the Insider's View of Southampton Homes, sponsored by the Southampton Historical Museum (May 14).

These design events include access to private and historic homes, cottage-style to contemporary homes, and glorious gardens in early bloom. Both house and garden tours are self-drive tours—you get a map and directions when you pick up your tickets—so it makes sense to carpool with family or friends. As with upcoming home and garden tours we will preview in these pages, the proceeds benefit the sponsoring entities or local charities. It's a great way to give back while getting "inside the ropes." Enjoy!

The East Hampton Village House & Garden Tour is a tour of six blooming gardens and classic houses in and near the Village of East Hampton. There will be a kick-off cocktail party hosted by Ken Lipper and catered by Carolyn Snyder of Round Swamp Farm on Friday, May 6, from 6 to 8 p.m. The tour takes place on Saturday, May 7, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The cost is $50 for the tour and $125 for the tour and cocktail party. Two tickets to the cocktail party and tour can be purchased for $350 and the purchasers will be included in the St. Luke's Church program. Proceeds go to the completion of St. Luke's Episcopal Church's Parrish Hall, which is used for community meetings, AA meetings, Maureen's Haven shelter, art exhibits and more. For reservations call 631-329-0990. Homes on this tour include:

Bee Cottage — Design junkies have followed the renovation of this 1920s stucco cottage in the pages of House Beautiful. Now you can tour this Fithian Lane house up close and personal!

Alexandra Munroe and Robert Rosenkrantz's Manor House — This classic 1928 manor house sits on an ocean dune and features a variety of gardens and grasses. Snacks and drinks will be served.

Dianne Benson's Garden — This stylish garden is noted for its layering and mixing of colors and textures, and exotic plants that return year after year. The largest magnolia on the East End and a rare Temple's Upright sugar maple are garden highlights. Inside the home is a magnificent collection of contemporary art.

Peter Wilson's Garden — Behind a berm on the corner of Further Lane and Cross Highway, this three-acre garden designed by Craig Socia has Japanese overtones, rock-hewn stairs and other surprises.

Calista Washburn's Garden — This is a real "gardener's garden" with spring bulbs and unusual trees such as Crape Myrtle and old espaliered pear. A folly for dining and a little red barn sit within the ocean's roar.

Ken Lipper's Home — The former Helen and Claus Hoie house on Hook Pond Lane has been renovated with the addition of a master bedroom and a small pool. Don't miss the swans in the pond!

An Insider's View of Southampton Homes, Saturday, May 14, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., is sponsored by the Southampton Historical Museum to benefit the museum's education programs. The tour includes the interiors of six private homes and two historic house museums in Southampton, Shinnecock Hills and Water Mill. After the tour, guests will attend a Champagne Reception sponsored by

TWENTY SOMETHING

by David Lion Rattiner

By David Lion Rattiner

In second and third grade I attended the St. Andrew's School in Sag Harbor, currently known as the Stella Maris Regional School, which might soon close its doors. Stella Maris is a Catholic School.

I am not a Catholic. I am half-Jewish and half-Catholic and consider myself both. Once a month or more, I attend a church service on Sunday in Southampton. To me, my religion is personal and I think that is true for everybody.

This article is not about religion however, it is about education, and I want to say that if it wasn't for the teachers at the Stella Maris School in Sag Harbor, I do not think that I would have turned out as well as I did. The experience I had in second and third grade at Stella Maris was powerful. I developed a healthy respect for God, which gave me an enormous amount of drive to do well in school and to follow the rules. In first grade, I was pretty well known for being a problematic type of kid who caused a ruckus in the classroom, which was why my parents took me out of the Springs School and entered me into Catholic school. Let me tell you, the Nuns there straightened me out real quick.

Every day, I wore a tie to school and a dress jacket. We prayed in the morning, went to church on Wednesdays (where I was unable to eat bread or drink wine because I never had communion and was always jealous of my friends because I was hungry). When we weren't thinking about how to be better people and to do good in the world, we were studying, hard. By third grade, I had filled the shoes of a good little Catholic school kid. I was considered an advanced student at that point, saw myself as a smart kid. I can remember having a deep respect for nuns, my teachers, the school in general and an overall sense of knowing who I was and where I was headed. I really do remember this, as if it were yesterday.

For the fourth grade, I was moved back to the Springs public school. My former Springs kindergarten teacher couldn't believe the type of kid that I turned out to be. I was miles ahead of the Springs fourth graders. I can remember the teacher showing us how to do multiplication with more than three-digit numbers and I thought to myself, I already know this. Between fourth grade and sixth grade, school was something that came naturally to me. But what was really going on was that I had developed such a strong work ethic at Stella Maris and learned so much, that it all came together at the Springs School. All of my Springs school teachers, since I was no longer known as the "problem" kid but as the "smart" kid, encouraged me left and right, which in my opinion is what kids need the most when going through school, somebody with authority constantly telling you, "You can do this because you are smart."

I also always dressed up for school, as that was something that I was naturally prone to do from my experience at Stella Maris. To me, a dress shirt and khaki's felt even a bit dressed down when going to school, because I was so used to wearing a tie and jacket. There have been countless studies that show those who wear serious clothes, feel more serious and therefore accomplish more at work.

In seventh grade, school got hard again, but not because I didn't know how to study. It was because of the stress of learning how to socialize—with girls most specifically—a whole education unto itself. I went to East Hampton High School, where I felt I had a good education, then was accepted to Northeastern University in Boston and graduated with a degree in finance. Most of my life I was able keep to keep an A-average.

Anyway, the point of all of this is that Stella Maris is a good school. No, it's a GREAT school. There is sort of this anti-religion thing going on with people today, as if bringing religion into school will somehow damage your kid. This is just not the case when it comes to Stella Maris. What it is about is getting a good education and teaching children morals that are the basis for laws that unquestionably benefit our society.

My experience with Stella Maris was that it was a school with teachers who cared about the kids there, cared about their future and did everything they could to mold them into being good people who cared about other people. It would be a shame to see Stella Maris close.

THE HAMPTON SUBWAY NEWSLETTER

"Along with the New York Subway System, Hampton's Subway is the only underground transit system in the State of New York."

Week of April 29 – May 4, 2011

Riders this week: 8,313

Rider miles this week: 91,411

DOWN IN THE TUBE

Mark Feuerstein, the leading man in the television series "Royal Pains," was seen on the subway between Water Mill and Bridgehampton in his white doctor's coat with a stethoscope around his neck. A woman approached him and asked if he could give her advice about a bad back she had, but he said he wasn't permitted to do that, but he did give her his card.

SUBWAY LOOKING FOR A NEW PR DIRECTOR

We don't really want to talk about last Sunday's Easter egg hunt on the subway system. It went really wrong. The subway system's latest Public Relations Director, Fred Applebottom, got approval to hold the hunt at the Southampton stop, but unfortunately he thought that meant the tunnels to the east and west of the stop rather than the platforms. The chocolate eggs and jelly beans were placed out on the tracks late Saturday night after the system closed as usual at 2 a.m., but nobody thought to consider that the subway system opens at 6 a.m. and the hunt was not scheduled to begin until 10 a.m. The entire subway system had to be shut down during those four hours because of the candy on the tracks, and then, when the kids and their parents arrived on the platform for the hunt, none of them would set foot out into the tunnels because of the "third rail." The subway system was restarted at 10:15 a.m., the kids left crying and all the subway cars smelled of chocolate and bounced around on wheels gunked up with jellybeans for the rest of the day.

NEW SIGN ON THE SUBWAY

The new green and white signs have now arrived and have been placed at the entrances to all our subway systems just next to the escalators going down. All new signs on the subway system are to be green as the subway goes green. The signs read NO SLIDING DOWN THE BANNISTERS. They were ordered put up by our legal department.

SUBWAY CARS GO GREEN

As a result of the survey conducted by P.R. Director Fred Applebottom (before his recent firing,) Commissioner Aspinall is now pleased to announce that the new paint job for all the subway cars this spring will be of green nature scenes done in a kind of abstract manner. The cars will be painted a few at a time out in our Montauk Yards and will begin to appear on the system around May 15 with the last of them in place on May 30.

Numerous colors and designs were proposed during the voting and a vigorous debate occurred among the bloggers who lounge around our website. It was fully understood that the idea would be to celebrate nature with the paint jobs, and the giant springing tiger painting garnered numerous votes, as did the painting of Cinderella's Fairy Godmother. But there was no clear winner. In the end, our Commissioner noted that two proposals were so close in style that if you combined them you had a majority and that would be that. One was from environmentalists who proposed flowers, fields, birds and small animals. The other was from war veterans of this community who wanted to see the paint job in military camouflage to honor those who defend our way of life. What you see will be a mixture of those two. By the way, those who said if the cars were painted in camouflage, it might happen that customers waiting for the trains might not see them are just dead wrong. Nonsense.

Also, those wags who proposed that a bird-sound whistle be mounted atop all the lead cars so that at top speed when the wind goes through the whistle the birds cheep should know that we do not consider this a joke and are indeed taking this very seriously.

SUBWAY CLOSED FOR FUMIGATION

Next Wednesday, the subway system will close at midnight and not reopen until 7 a.m. the next morning so the teams of pest control people can get into the tunnels and spray to get rid of all the bugs and other crawly things in there for the upcoming summer season. They are hatching now. Boy, are they in for a surprise.

The Old Parsonage — This Queen Anne style home was the parsonage for the Methodist Church in Southampton until it was moved to Water Mill in the 1980s.

DAR House — Originally built in the 1700s by an old Southampton family, the home was expanded in the 19th century to become a Summer Colony cottage in the center of Southampton's estate section. It was purchased in 1922 to be the headquarters for the Southampton Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution and is now a private home.

Corwin House — This very large 1890s Queen Anne home is located in an old section of Southampton among other historic buildings. It has a wraparound porch, stained glass windows and an elaborate turret.

Upper Ponds — At the center of this 6,000-square-foot home is the original 1800s farmhouse with several fireplaces and a large great room.

Summer Cottage — This 1890s shingled cottage has been expertly restored and expanded. The house was originally built by students of William Merritt Chase and his American Impressionist School. It is one of the few remaining cottages in Shinnecock Hills.

Halsey Stumpp House — Built by Captain Daniel E. Halsey in 1747, it was a farmhouse with land extending 1/2 mile north. It remained in the family until 1916 when George E.M. Stump turned the farm into a well-known nursery patronized by the Summer Colony.

Rogers Mansion — This 1843 mansion was home to whaling Captain Albert Rogers and his family. Sam Parrish, founder of the Parrish Art Museum, purchased the home in 1899 and had it remodeled by McKim, Mead and White.

The Thomas Halsey Homestead — Built by English pioneering settlers in 1666.

Who

here. "I learned a lot about pollution." Miller testified in Supreme Court when they were spraying DDT by airplane and all the fish died. He had photos and he presented a case. He was in the Civil Conservation Corp at 17 years old and has an honorable certificate from the United States Conservation Department. "It took two years for them to put a ban on DDT in the U.S., but Dupont still manufactured it and sent it overseas. Meanwhile they killed all the blue claws and soft clams. It was 10 years before they came back." Miller joined with the Audubon Society to protect the osprey on Gardiner's Island when they were laying their eggs. "Cartwright (Island) was the nesting place for gulls, terns. These guys were spraying formaldehyde on the bird eggs. Government said there were too many birds."

Miller has good old memories of a simpler time. "We had these Bonac Indian Clambakes." Clams, mussels, lobsters, meat, all wrapped up in cheesecloth. "Boy, that was good eating." There is no other place than East Hampton for Captain Miller. "I've been all over the world, and I wouldn't trade one grain of this beach sand for anyplace else."

Thank you, Captain. It was a pleasure.

COMMISSIONER ASPINALL'S MESSAGE

Ridership was off this past weekend because of a number of factors. There was rain on Friday and Saturday, there was a tornado in St. Louis, gas prices raced over $4 a gallon so fewer people tanked up to get out here and there was concern about America using drones to attach Gaddafi's forces outside of Misrata.

This weekend should be bright and shiny however, so we expect a leap up in ridership. Don't forget when boarding to remove those sunglasses. You might trip otherwise.

NORTH FORK

OVER THE BARREL by Lenn Thompson

A Taste of the Past. Excited for the Future.

Context matters. To fully appreciate the future and potential of a wine region, it helps to experience its past. Winemakers or writers can tell you that North Fork merlot will improve for 10 years in your cellar and hang on for maybe another five, but should you believe them?

Within a few key parameters, the answer is yes. I've tasted the truth. Long Island wines can not only survive a decade or two in your cellar, they can thrive.

Several weeks ago, I was lucky enough to attend a dinner at Luce+Hawkins – my current favorite restaurant on the East End – organized by Charles Massoud, co-owner of Paumanok Vineyards, and Jeff Jeff Filippi, a longtime supporter and consumer of local wines. The goals for the evening were to eat well – easy to do when Keith Luce is cooking for you – and to taste an array of older Long Island wines from a variety of producers.

In all, we had dipped into our respective cellars for 26 wines – from 1990 through 2001. Ignoring the two corked wines, the wines impressed. I'm not saying every wine was a stunner, but there certainly weren't any throwaways in this lineup. Some could age even longer in my opinion.

So yes, you can believe it when you hear that Long Island wines deserve a spot in your cellar – but not all of them. Many wines aren't meant to improve with extended time in bottle. I wish I could tell you with 100% certainty what every wine will do over its lifetime – however it's just too complex a process. But, after tasting the 26 older Long Island wines, I can offer some guidelines that will help you along the way.

Cabernet is King. There is little doubt that the best wines of the night were heavy on cabernet sauvignon. They consistently showed more complexity, intensity and life. There were several impressive merlots too.

Vintage REALLY Matters. We all know that vintage matters, but the cabernets wouldn't have shown nearly as well had we not tasted wines from top vintages like 1993 and 1995. Cabernet isn't easy on Long Island, but in the best years, from the best producers, they might be the region's most exciting wines. They certainly seem to have the most aging potential. Look for wines from 2005, 2007 and – eventually – 2010.

Look to Top Producers. We didn't taste average local wines that night. We tasted wines from Bedell Cellars, Haggrave Vineyard, Jamesport Vineyards, Gristina Vineyards, Lieb Family Cellars, Paumanok Vineyards, Peconic Bay Winery, Pellegrini Vineyards, Raphael and Wolfer Estate. Top producers are top for a reason. Here is a short list of favorites:

1999 Lieb Pinot Blanc: White of the night for me. Still a certain liveliness. Layered tree fruit, nutty and apple skin.

1990 Hargrave Vineyard Cabernet Sauvignon: Wow. Lively nose. Dried and plummy fruit. Tobacco leaf and minty. Not long, but great tannin-acid framework. Could age longer.

1993 Paumanok Merlot Grand Vintage: Mushroomy funk on the nose. Sweet bramble fruit with nice density and intensity. Hints of licorice that flourish with some air time.

1993 Bedell Cabernet Sauvignon: Complex with a mélange of red fruit and classic herbal minty notes along with licorice and brown sugar. Tastes far younger. One of my favorites of the night.

1993 Paumanok Grand Vintage Cabernet Sauvignon: Bright, complex with layers of fruit, spice and earth. Intense-but-smooth tannins. Tasted so young.

1995 Paumanok Assemblage: Cab sauv heavy (55%) blend with merlot (35%) and cab franc (10%). Two stars. Beautiful, complex, lively, beautifully structured and has plenty of time ahead.

1997 Bedell Cabernet Sauvignon: Fruity with a savory edge. Complex and no rough edges.

Spring Preparations for Summer Glory

By Jeanelle Myers

Today we mowed the lawn for the first time this year and did the first weed patrol of all of the beds. The spring weeds are scary, they grow very quickly and go to seed quickly. As soon as they have dispersed their seed, they die and one is tempted to not take them too seriously. When they appear the next year in even greater abundance, the prudent gardener pulls them, before the seed dispersal this time around.

The peas are just coming up. They have a trellis to grow on made from bamboo. I made it with canes from the thinnings of the various bamboo stands on the property. I like the old-fashioned vining peas so these trellises are about seven feet tall with the top branches of the bamboo canes left on inside of the trellis to catch the peas as they grow. This pea is called Mr. Big and, if kept happy, he will cover his trellises before he is finished. The peas are indeed big, but it is the pod that is really big, containing seven to eight peas which are sweet and tender, despite their large size.

In the greenhouse, there are tiny plants destined for the garden and others for pots. There are tomatoes; I like to try some new varieties each year and I prefer the heirlooms. There are also eggplants, three different kinds of not-too-hot peppers, escarole and four kinds of lettuce. This year I have three kinds of morning glories, moon vines, of course, cup and saucer vine (cobia scandens), love in a puff (cardiospermum), and corkscrew vine (vigna caracalla).

I admit that I grow these last three just because they are my favorite vines, easily growable from seed. We have begun to move the morning glories outside for the day and back into the greenhouse for the night. The greenhouse doors stay open during the day but are closed against the cold night air.

The chickens seem to be enjoying the warmer weather. They got several broken-up bales of straw to scratch around in. The bales had been surrounding three pots of lotus and were there to protect the pots more than the lotus.

I have had a lotus in my garden for years in a pot in the ground. Each year it gets frozen and each year it blooms. For the ceramic pots above ground we surround the top and sides with bales. After these bales have been with the chickens, they will go to the compost pile. Hopefully the chickens will have eaten the seeds and, of course, they will have enriched the straw with their contributions and helped it to begin to break down.

The garden beds are ablaze with the early daffodils, hyacinths, early tulips and some white muscari (grape hyacinth). I am very fond of muscari of all types but especially the white ones. They look like miniature pearls on a stem and, as such, accentuate the jewel-like possibilities of the other flowers. Also, the leaves of other bulb flowers to come are covering the beds with green, some with buds tucked down inside. And the red shoots of the early peonies are standing at attention. Outside the window beside my desk, our Sargent Cherry is blooming. This cherry is often used as grafting stock for more decorative cherries. The flowers are small and last only a few days but are enjoyed at our house with gusto for those few days!

Soon the seeds of carrots, radish, spinach, and cilantro will be up. The onion plants from Johnny's Seeds came, so I guess spring is really here!!!

ART COMMENTARY

by Marion W. Weiss

Juliao Sarmiento at The Parrish

The Parrish Art Museum has taken a daring step forward with its current exhibit, "Juliao Sarmiento: Artists and Writers/House and Home." Why? Because some people won't "get it," yet the museum proceeded anyway. It was even hard at first for this critic to determine the works' meaning. Images seem unconnected to each other, there's lots of negative space and often words spill out across the canvases.

The paintings' combination of words and images is not particularly new, however. Consider pieces by Patrick Ireland, a former art professor at Southampton College, and collaborations by artist Larry Rivers and poet Frank O' Hara. Or last summer's Guild Hall show featuring installations by Barbara Kruger (which was pure text and no images).

Literal language on a canvas is "in," but that's not to suggest that images are not language either. In fact, the term language refers to a wide range of endeavors, including verbal (writing/talking), non-verbal (body language, etc.) and visual. The exhibit incorporates these varied communication forms with Sarmiento's visuals, James Salter's verbal fictional story and Laurie Anderson's verbal and non-verbal performance of Salter's narrative.

Key to understanding these diverse communication forms is semiology: the system of signs. Signs are mechanisms that help determine the message (both literal and figurative). For example, a literal/visual sign features a curve in the road; we know what that means. How about the "No Smoking" sign showing a cigarette with a line through it?

Many of Sarmiento's paintings convey non-verbal signs, including a woman with no head, standing with her arms crossed. We say "non-verbal" because it is the arm position and posture which convey meaning: perhaps confidence, perhaps defiance, perhaps self-protectiveness. Yet the exact meaning is ambivalent. So is the visual juxtaposition of the female depicted on Salter's book jackets at the bottom of the canvases. All the women shown are incomplete, with no facial features. Is this Sarmiento's comment on the weaker sex or is he suggesting, rather, that females are imprisoned in an uncaring world?

We can, however, interpret Sarmiento's works using another model suggested by Parrish Museum Director, Terrie Sultan, who says that his endeavors are "fragmented narratives" or stories. We would prefer to characterize the pieces not based on con-

arrogant gait

Juliao Sarmiento's
What Makes A Writer Great

reassembled to form another perception of reality. A film by Sarmiento also shows how images and text seem unrelated: a beautiful black horse running around in a barn (perhaps trying to escape) is juxtaposed with a young girl reading from a book. Her words seem to have nothing to do with the horse although a closer "reading" may reveal the relationship, particularly the connotations of "broken" and "passion."

Sarmiento presents many possibilities for different meanings no matter what approach he uses, and that is a positive and potent challenge.

The current show will be on view at the Parrish Art Museum, 25 Jobs Lane, Southampton, until June 11. Call 631-283-2118.

did this locale inspire you?

A: Elliot Meisel, brother of my art dealer Louis Meisel, took me flying while I was staying in the Hamptons. I was struck by the complexity and structure of this area from above and found the new dimension inspiring. The memories during this experience remained with me during the creation of the painting.

Q: What about your photorealistic style, which is your signature, I would imagine? How has this approach inspired you?

A: Painting is a journey. I have been inspired by many different things and as a consequence I have painted many different compositions, although always relating to landscapes and/or cityscapes. However, my style has always been photorealism. For me, art is to transmit onto the canvas everyday experiences and ideas, and I think photorealism allows you as an artist to express fully what you are trying to say.

Q: Where did you learn this style; what was your art training like?

A: I have had a very unorthodox upbringing. My father was an architect, and we lived in different countries. I have never been to school. My parents "home taught" me and my brother with the help of the National Extension College. My total freedom gave me the time to cultivate my true passions, among which was art. When I was 18, I had formed my style but was still searching for the perfect technical ability.

Q: What part did Roberto Bernardi play, a fellow photorealistic artist?

Raffaella Spence,
self-portrait, Umbria, Italy.

A: He was also at the beginning of his career and together we spent a lot of time visiting museums, studying techniques used in the past, discussing and exchanging ideas. Ever since our meeting 12 years ago, we have been together and still enjoy this continuous artistic collaboration.

Q: What role has New York played in your artistic growth?

A: There is no doubt that New York is an unbelievably vibrant city. Not only is New York amazing, but above all I have had the opportunity since 2002 to show my paintings and enjoy the success of four solo shows. New York is also stimulating because it gives you the opportunity to confront yourself with the best contemporary artists, and this gives you the initiative to always give it your best.

Q: Do you have a favorite artist, contemporary or not?

A: I think that Michelangelo and Caravaggio both, in their own way, created a new form of realism which was totally different to what preceded them.

Q: If you weren't an artist, what would you be doing?

A: I would have liked to produce wine, either in Italy or France, two countries where I have spent most of my life. However, only through painting can I transmit what I feel inside.

Raffaella Spence is having a show at New York's Bernarducci Meisel Gallery (37 W. 57th Street), from May 5 to May 28. Call 212-593-3757.

HONORING THE ARTIST

by Marion W. Weiss

Raffaella Spence

Cover artist Raffaella Spence has led a wonderful but unorthodox life, beginning with the fact that both her grandfather and father were architects to the Queen of England. For Spence, that meant living in Rome when her father was commissioned to do the British Embassy there. While Spence resided in Rome for 20-odd years, she also traveled to other countries while she was growing up.

Her current paintings mirror an astute sense of place wherever that may be; her photorealistic style reinforces the absolute clarity and connection she is able to bring to her art. Yet the work is unorthodox as well. For example, "Good Morning Venice" has a view from the canal showing buildings that seem more modern and not a bit like the romantic perception we have of Venice. Some paintings, however, are less realistic, with objects reflected in the water, especially "Central Park." Again, buildings (skyscrapers) are a subtle but potent part of the landscape. Spence's sensitivity to architecture is obvious and perhaps may be derived from her father's influence.

Q: You have painted landscapes all over the world, but the cover features the Hamptons. How

Food & Dining

SIMPLE ART OF COOKING

by Silvia Lehrer

Spring Spree, a gala event to benefit The Retreat and With Care organizations, will take place on Saturday, April 30, and Sunday, May 1, at the Water Mill Bridge Club in Water Mill. Both groups serve the needs of local women and children in crisis. The two-day event will kick off with a cocktail party on April 30, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m., featuring delectable hors d'oeuvres, full open bar, live auction, a boutique sale and an advance signing of my new book, Savoring the Hamptons. On Sunday, May 1, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., the boutique sale continues with collectibles, coffee, beverages, baked goods and snacks throughout the day.

On Saturday, Delaney Oser of Thyme & Again Catering in Southampton will be serving scrumptious hors d'oeuvres prepared with seasonal, locally grown ingredients. Below are some of her delicious recipes that guests will be enjoying at this East End benefit. For further information on the event call Heather at 631-329-4398.

GRILLED CHICKEN SKEWERS WITH PISTACHIO PESTO AND RHUBARB DIPPING SAUCE

Delaney's pesto and dipping sauce can be made ahead and refrigerated in suitable containers. Be sure to soak the skewers before threading the chicken for the grill.

Makes approximately 10 servings

Pistachio Pesto

- 1/2 cup coarsely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
- 2 tablespoons coarsely chopped tarragon leaves
- 2 tablespoons unsalted pistachios (not red)
- 1 tablespoon fresh lime juice
- 1 clove garlic
- 1/2-inch piece chopped fresh ginger
- 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil

For the dipping sauce

- 2 cups sliced rhubarb, about 1 to 1 1/2 pounds
- 1 cup organic ketchup
- 1/3 cup water
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 2 tablespoons chopped chipotle peppers in adobo
- 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
- 2 cloves garlic, chopped
- 1/2 teaspoon salt or to taste

For the chicken

- 2 pounds boneless chicken breast, sliced thin

1. Mix the first 6 ingredients for the pesto in a blender and blend to a puree. Slowly pour the olive oil through the opening in the cover until the mixture is homogenous. Set aside.

2. Combine all the ingredients in a saucepan and simmer over medium heat for about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Let cool, then pour into a blender and puree. Set aside.

3. For serving, thread each slice of chicken through a 5-inch skewer. Preheat your grill to medium-high. Meanwhile, warm the dipping sauce in a saucepan over low heat. Brush the chicken with the pistachio pesto and place skewers on the grill for about 2 minutes on each side. Chicken is done when the meat is springy to the touch. Be careful not to overcook the chicken or the slices will dry out. Arrange the skewers on a platter and serve with warm the dipping sauce.

SPINACH, PEA AND GOAT CHEESE TURNOVERS

For this recipe Delaney uses Catapano goat cheese and frozen puff pastry.

Thaw the pastry overnight in the refrigerator. Makes approximately 30 turnovers

- 1 sheet prepared puff pastry
- 10 ounces fresh spinach
- 2 cups fresh peas or 1 10-ounce package frozen peas
- 2 to 3 tablespoons thinly sliced scallion, white and light green parts
- 1 tablespoon coarsely chopped fresh mint
- 2 to 3 tablespoons coarsely chopped fresh cilantro
- Kosher salt & pepper to taste
- 1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 tablespoon unsalted butter
- 3 ounces Catapano goat cheese, softened
- Egg wash: 1 egg, 2 tablespoons water, whisked together

1. Remove heavy stems from spinach, then rinse well and dry in a clean kitchen towel.

2. Melt butter with the oil in a 12-inch skillet. Add spinach and sauté until tender, stirring occasionally. Add peas, scallion, mint, cilantro, salt and pepper and stir to mix. Remove from heat and stir in the goat cheese to mix well. Let mixture cool.

3. Cut the thawed pastry into 2 and 1/2-inch squares. Put 1 tablespoon filling in center of each square and fold into triangles. With the tines of a fork press edges of the triangles closed. Brush with egg wash. Bake in 375° F. oven until puffed and golden – approximately 12 minutes.

Silvia (continued from page 49)

Makes about 30 pancakes

For the duck

1 5-pound Crescent Farm Duck or pre-roasted duck

3 tablespoons soy sauce

3 tablespoons honey

1/3 cup hoisin sauce

2 teaspoons five-spice powder

For the pancakes

1 cup all-purpose flour

2 tablespoons unsalted butter (reserve 2 melted teaspoon for batter)

1/4 teaspoon kosher salt

1/4 teaspoon water

4 large eggs

1 bunch scallions, white and light green part thinly sliced

Preheat oven to 375° F.

1. Remove giblets from duck, rinse well and dry with paper towel. Cut away all excess fat and discard. Take running stitches with a fork through the skin. Mix the soy and honey and brush the duck with the glaze. Place on a rack in a roasting pan and roast duck until internal temperature reaches 170° F., about 1 1/2 hours. Cool and shred the duck meat. Add hoisin and five-spice powder to the shredded duck to taste and stir to mix. Can be prepared up to one day ahead in a suitable container.

2. Place pancake ingredients (less 2 teaspoons melted butter) in a blender and blend for 1 minute. Scrape down sides and blend for another minute. Transfer to a bowl and stir scallions into the mixture. Heat a 6-inch crepe pan or skillet over medium heat and add the reserved butter. When butter foam subsides add 6 tablespoons batter. Twirl the pan for the batter to cover. Cook approximately 1 minute on one side then flip the pancake and cook for an additional 30 seconds. Transfer the pancakes to a parchment-lined baking sheet as they are done and allow to cool completely. Can be prepared up to one day ahead, wrapped and refrigerated.

3. When ready to serve fold 1 tablespoon or so of the shredded duck into the scallion pancakes creating bite-size triangles and serve.

HAMPTONS EPICURE

Stacy Dermont

Some people look at cupcakes and see breasts.

There's been a lot of chatter on food blogs recently about what treat will be "the next cupcake." Cupcake bakeries have spread like a sugary firestorm in recent years.

What's next on the baked good zeitgeist? Some say pie, some say whoopie pie.

It brings to mind that long weekend somewhere in the now dim 1980s when camouflage was hailed as the new black. Yeah, right.

I'll tell you what the next cupcakes are – they're cupcakes!

Apart from Rice Krispies Treats, nothing invites you to relive childhood parties like a cupcake. (And sticking birthday candles into Rice Krispies Treats is tricky.)

Size matters. No one is going to buy a box of big ol' pies to share at the office.

Plus cupcakes are finger food – no muss, no fuss. They're small enough that we can convince ourselves that the calorie count is nominal. Size so matters!

Whoopie pies? They have some growth edges.

Photo Credit

Not everyone has been romanced by the whoopie as yet. But whoopie pies are filled with fluff. Fluff.

Cupcakes are the real thing, a chip off the ol' block. Besides, some people look at cupcakes and see breasts. That sort of association never hurts sales.

At The Water Mill Cupcake Company they've added whoopie pies, but their biggest seller remains their red velvet cupcake with cream cheese frosting. They've been making pies and full-sized cakes from the start.

We can thank cupcake bakeries for re-introducing the neighborhood bakeshop to American children. Some cupcakeries may need to diversify to stay in business; I can almost smell the fresh bread and croissants now...

There's also a lot of talk these days about shrinking food packaging – that yesterday's 16 oz. can of corn is now a 14.5 oz. can. It's a dirty little trick that big food companies are playing. Soaring food prices? Give 'em a little less; keep the price where it is – stupid Americans won't notice.

Of course as this impacts our family food budget we do notice.

I noticed something else, though.

A pint is still a pint, a quart is still a quart and a peck is still one fourth of a bushel. Even a gallon remains...you guessed it, a gallon.

Those old glass food jars and bushel baskets that our grandparents used still work and they still hold the same amount of food.

I'm from upstate New York so I've known a lot of crabby farmers, but I've never met a dishonest organic farmer. The earnestness of people who grow food organically is palpable.

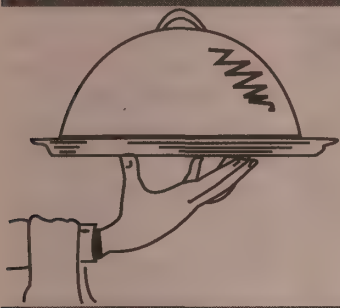

You might pay more for "packaged" organic food at your local farmers market, but it looks better, tastes better, is better than any other. Plus those jars are re-useable.

READ ME

Dear Dan,

I'm alerting you to my latest blog posting: WHAT WE NEED IS A NEW TSUNAMI. It describes what we've experienced over the past month, ever since we released Karl Grossman's Cover Up: What You Are Not Supposed To Know About Nuclear Power as a free download.

The good news is that over 10,000 people have heard or read Karl's documentation that this energy source is likely to be the end of us if not stopped, despite the failure of mainstream media to give him any platform at all (thank God for the alternatives). And I name those individuals (including Diane Rehm, among others, as an example), news reporters and columnists for magazines and newspapers who fiddle while Rome burns, as well as supposedly "progressive" networks like PBS and NPR.

I think you will find it hard to dispute any of this, and hope you will read this blog and pass it on.

GUNNIN' FOR GUNTHER

Dear Dan,

Dr. Günther Geiss' endless regurgitating of skewed figures, half-truths, general misinformation and so very sad personal opinions about The Southold Animal Shelter proves once again that old professors never die, they just keep on quixotically lecturing like furry energized bunnies.

AN OBITUARY FOR LUCY

Dear Dan,

Lucy lived most of her life in the Hamptons. At 3:30 on Sunday afternoon 4/17/11, Lucy left us.

After much agonizing we realized it was time to let her go. She lived an amazing 16.5 years. Lucy was our best friend, constant dinner companion, world traveler and a fabulous shopper. Everywhere we went she was treated like a superstar.

Some of her favorite things were chasing birds on the beach, walking in Southampton, eating shrimp from Corjays and shopping at T.J. Maxx. She also loved cuddling and being serenaded.

There will never be another Lucy. She was one of a kind.

Instead of flowers, please give donations to ARF. Thank you.

HELP SAVE THE EGYPTIAN HORSES

Dear friends and animal lovers,

I was wondering whether you've heard about the terrible plight of the Egyptian horses around the pyramids since the recent revolution. I came across a horrifying article in the Geneva papers by a Swiss journalist who saw what's going on. Apparently they are starving en masse because tourists are staying away. There is no sympathy for them locally as they were used to terrorize people on Tahrir Square (remember that incongruous medieval stampede) - as though the horses had a say in that!

I was wondering whether through your animal channels you might know people who'd be interested in donating or doing something. I've sent the links and the Swiss article to a number of horse-lovers in Geneva and donated a few pennies myself, but of course it's a drop in the ocean. Their lives are so miserable at the best of times one can ask oneself whether this isn't the best solution, but then death by starvation isn't particularly humane either.

I'm sending you several links in case you have any ideas as to people you might be able to talk to. I realize that you're helping already have your hands full, but who knows there may be some horsey people there. The first one is the Egyptian soc. for animals, which seems to be doing the best it can at the moment. The initial article I saw was in 'le Temps', a Geneva paper on April 4, entitled 'Hécatombe de chevaux au pied des pyramides' (esmaegypt.org). <http://petsadviser.com/fur-and-prrr/egypt-horses-dying-after-revolution/> be tainted with the deadly pathogen Staphylococcus aureus. The study tested 136 samples of beef, chicken, pork, and turkey in five cities. Half of the bacteria were resistant to antibiotics. One organism - MRSA, is a leading cause of fatal infections in schools and hospitals.

The authors suggest that feeding antibiotics to animals in factory farms may contribute to this resistance. Indeed, two thirds of all antibiotics in the U.S. are used to promote the growth of farmed animals and contain infectious diseases induced by their extreme crowding and stress.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration should ban the routine use of antibiotics in factory farms. The European Union has adopted such a ban in 2006. The World Health Organization has recommended a worldwide phase-out.

In the meantime, each of us should replace animal products in our diet with vegetables, fresh fruits, legumes, and grains. These foods contain all the nutrients we require, without deadly pathogens, antibiotics, pesticides, carcinogens, cholesterol, and saturated fats. They are touted by every major health advocacy organization and were the recommended fare in the Garden of Eden.

Sincerely,
Brian Williams
Stonington, CT

POLICE BLOTTER

Bang

A man decided that he was going to fire off his rifle at the Speonk Elementary School last week over a dispute about jewelry. He is 24 years old and the dispute came about after an argument with his girlfriend. Nobody was injured after he fired the rifle, but this guy was arrested so fast by police officers who responded to the incident that he didn't even know what hit him. Maybe while he is in jail a brain cell in his head will grow, and then possibly another will grow, but I have my doubts.

Brooklyn Bum

This is sad. A 33-year-old man from Brooklyn was found sleeping in an abandoned restaurant space in East Hampton. The man was not paying for the space and appeared to be homeless. Police let the man spend the night, but then required him to leave the following day.

Fraud

A woman in East Hampton reported to police that somebody used her name and Social Security number to open an online bank account that was not hers. Police opened up an investigation and advised the woman to watch the movie The Net, starring Sandra Bullock, so that she is scared straight about the dangers of not protecting her private information.

Shelter Island

Old Man McGumbus, 96, and former WWII sabotage specialist, was recovering from a weightlifting injury to his bicep after competing in a strongman competition at the Old Whalers Beer House on Shelter Island, when he noticed a tree was blocking passage to the gun shop on Cherry Paradise Lane. McGumbus startled a few residents when he lobbed a grenade at the tree, effectively blowing it up and out of the road, clearing the way. The tree landed on top of Charles McSwickerton's garage and crashed through the roof, causing damage. McSwickerton decided not to press any charges and thanked McGumbus for getting the tree out of the road.

Money Fight

Two men from Southampton were arrested for assault after they beat a former friend of theirs with a fireplace poker. The beating took place over a dispute that involved $20. Yes $20, as in twenty dollars, that is not a typo. Both men, who are in their 40s by the way, said they were owed $20 between the two of them by the other man. They said that he would not pay them because he didn't have the money, so in response they decided to beat him to the point where he needed to go to the hospital. They were both arrested and brought to jail.
